There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails. Rev. C. F. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, asthma, and thought you had overpromised yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wille. We'll send it by mail POSTPAID. Rattled.

The Journal-Gazette is fearfully rattled because the SENTINEL published a news item stating that Col. Kilbourne recently took the employees of the Kilbourne & Jacobs Co. to the Buffalo Exposition on a four day's excursion at the expense of the company.

It wants to know if the SENTINEL means that the statement is true? It is, in each and every particular.

The Journal-Gazette intimates that if true, then Col. Kilbourne had a corrupt motive. This insinuation is wholly false and gratuitous.

For fifteen years the company which Col. Kilbourne is President, has been giving its employees an annual outing, all expense of which is met by the company. In 1893, it took its employees to the World's fair at Chicago on a five days' trip, paying every expense.

Col. Kilbourne gives this from no selfish motive, but because he feels that his company can afford to do so, and because he takes a real interest in his hundreds of employees, with each of whom he is personally acquainted.

Of course, the editor of the Journal-Gazette can not understand this. He measures other men by his own standard. He has no conception of broad Humanitarianism.

Let Him Produce.

The editor of the Journal-Gazette offers to "contribute liberally for the use and benefit of the Public Library or the Sunday schools of Logan," as soon as he finds out that Gen. Grosvenor ever spoke, voted for or assented to the doctrine of the free coinage of gold and silver.

Let him go to Columbus and examine the House and Senate Journals when the General was Speaker and he will find the following facts:

1. A joint resolution was introduced into that Republican Legislature in favor of free coinage of gold and silver.
2. That it was adopted almost unanimously.
3. That Gen. Grosvenor voted for it.
4. That he signed it as Speaker of the House.

That ought to hold Brother McKay for a few days. The legislative journals do not contain the speeches of members, but Gen. Grosvenor spoke in favor of the resolution.

No blame attaches to Gen. Grosvenor, either. He voted his own and his constituents' sentiments. Our late beloved President voted for the Bland-Allison act and the Sherman Silver Purchase act. Gen. Grosvenor also favored them. And yet no Democrat will, and no Republican should, cast a slur on either the dead or living Republican statesmen who voted for these measures.

Democratic Headquarters have been opened in the rooms occupied last year, in the Opera House, adjoining the Opera Hall. The Democrats from town and country are invited to call and be at home. The Committeemen are especially invited. The Campaign is now on and all Democrats and all opponents of Truism and the obnoxious policies of the Republican party will be cordially welcomed.

The Death of the President.

The joy of the nation is turned into mourning. The hoping even against hope is ended. The skill of science, the labors of love, the prayers of the people were all in vain.

The President is dead. And for the third time, the annals of this peaceful Republic have been stained with the blood of a murdered President—here where the people have no ruler but, themselves, here where liberty is secure and all men are free!

The latest victim of this horrible and anomalous crime, like the two who fell before him, was the most amiable and well-disposed of men, with nothing but kindness in his heart for a ray of his fellow citizens—with malice toward none, with charity for all! His greatest ambition was to serve his country in the love of men and the fear of God.

That such a President should be singled for assassination would be incredible but for the sadly remembered fate that befell the great and gentle Lincoln and the genial Garfield.

President McKinley had grown in the estimation of his countrymen, irrespective of party, since his election. Always a progressive man, moving with the people if not trying to lead them, he had developed a capacity for initiative that promised a still larger measure of success for his second term. His last public speech made at the Exposition on the day before the atrocious and fatal assault, was not only graceful, pregnant and eloquent, but by that rare good fortune which attended Mr. McKinley throughout all his political career, it struck the popular chord at so precisely the right time, and on exactly the most suitable occasion, as to receive universal approval.

Fit to be engraved upon his monument and to live forever in the minds of his countrymen are these lofty words from McKinley's last speech:

LET US EVER REMEMBER THAT OUR INTEREST IS IN CONCORD, NOT IN CONFLICT, AND THAT OUR REAL EMERGENCY RESTS ON THE VICTORIES OF PEACE, NOT THOSE OF WAR.

Mr. McKinley was valuable as an example, and especially dear to people whom he typified in so many of their best traits and characteristics in his private and domestic life. Religious, pure, upright, constant, courageous chivalric faithful to every duty, he was a model citizen and husband.

His death at this time in this way can only be regarded as a national calamity. All classes, all parties, all sections grieve and lament as they have not done since the fatal day when Lincoln was stricken down, with "charity for all" in his heart and his great work of peacemaking unfinished before him.

McKinley Memorial.

On last Friday evening, at about 8 o'clock, the news came that President McKinley was dead. The Court House bell and the Church bells tolled requiem. In a short time the word came, "not dead, but dying." All night long, the town kept awake, waiting for the death bell. When the final news came, 2:15 a. m. "The President dead," the watchers again tolled the bells. Saturday was a sad day in Logan. But little business was done. Most of the stores, and private houses had on drapery of mourning.

On Saturday evening, the Mayor called a meeting in the Court House where he presided. Ed. Tritch, secretary.

On motion, the chairman appointed a committee or arrangements to take charge of memorial public services, on the day of funeral.

The committee is as follows: F. M. McKay, J. B. Dollison, C. V. Thurness, Ed. Wade, Harry Ambrose.

On motion the following were appointed a committee on Resolutions viz:

Judge S. H. Bright, Col. E. W. W. V. C. Lowry, Rev. Dr. Seward, Fr. Powers, Judge Wright. The meeting adjourned subject to the day fixed for National Memorial services, Thursday.

On Sunday evening memorial services were held at the M. E. Church. The church was crowded, and many coming could not find room within. Rev. Sayer led in prayer, and Judge Bright made an appropriate address.

Miss Vernie, the handsome and accomplished daughter of Mr. Wm. H. Hamsel, of near Union Furnace, is the guest of Mrs. Chas. Hamsel, of North Walnut street.

ANARCHISM

Is Entitled to no Place Within the United States.

The murderous assault upon President McKinley at Buffalo, has aroused the American people to a realization of the dangerous element which has been permitted to grow up in this country.

The act of the Polish anarchist is widely different in every essential from the assassination of two former presidents.

President Lincoln was the victim of the bitter rancher and passion born of the great civil war of 40 years ago, stirred to action by the inordinate use of alcohol and stimulants which crazed a weak minded actor. For the act there was not even the slightest palliation.

President Garfield fell the victim of a member of his own political party who longed for an office which he was in no wise fitted to hold. He nursed his disappointment and personal grievances to the point of desperate insanity and became a murderer without the shadow of justification.

But the assassin of President McKinley did not have even the miserable excuse of the preceding two bloody and semi-insane butchers.

He belongs to a school of professional murderers and enemies of every form of civilized government.

He took the coward's advantage of the confidence inspired by our form of government to commit a cowardly murder, not because the president had ever done him a private or public injury, but because he was the representative of a free and liberal government, against which the assassin was as much at war as against the absolute rule of the Sultan of Turkey.

The anarchist's act was to strike at the government itself and throw the state into confusion, that he and his fellow schoolmen might riot in the chaos that would follow.

He is the type of public enemy compared with which the mad dog is innocent. It is, indeed, a grave question as to what shall be done with this dangerous class, which belongs neither to the human race nor the brute creation, and is wholly destitute of the higher instincts and principles of both.

It is clear, however, that they have no right to run at large in any American community. Its members have no right to meet and a plot assassination under the plea of the constitutional right to assemble together.

They Resist That Victory Is Theirs Because They Have Plenty of Booze, While the Democrats Have None.

Toledo, O., Sept. 10.—The qualities and propensities of a party are readily seen in the tone and content of the newspaper press that represents it. It generally, if not always, reflects the sentiments, feelings and designs of the party leaders.

The Republican press at this time is worth the closest scrutiny of not only the political student, but all honest, high-principled men.

The central organ over at Columbus is not, in the literary sense, the ablest Republican newspaper in the state.

And yet it is more than that. It first and officially voices the views, opinions and policies, whether open or covert of the directorate of the party. The able "editor" at the head of the literary bureau of the Republican executive committee furnishes these ready-made and fresh from Mark Hanna's mint in Cleveland.

If you see a thing in the central organ it is Republican. Whatever it says respecting politics or the management of political campaigns, has a deep meaning and a purpose, as frivolous as it may appear, and is the matured thought and purpose behind the machine.

One feature of this campaign more striking than in previous ones is daily made prominent by the organ and echoed and re-echoed by the other Republican papers throughout the state.

That feature is the gross and vulgar commercialism that has seized and controls the Republican organization and threatens to contaminate the individuals of the party.

The organ as the mouthpiece of the directorate of the party does not directly preach the doctrine of corruption in the electorate with money. It proceeds by indirection.

When Colonel Kilbourne, in his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for governor, denounced all forms of corruption in selection of public officials, and said that while he could afford to be defeated neither he nor any honest man could afford to take an office corruptly secured, the Journal twitted him by asking how he expected to be elected without the use of money and ridiculed his manliness as either squeamishness or deliberate deception.

BRANCH SCHOOL of

WORK'S Garment Cutter!

The Ladies' Great Tailor System

OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

50,000 of These Systems Sold in the Past Three Years.

We have decided to organize and teach a school in this city where ladies, both old and young, can learn to cut, fit and make any garment worn by the family. We are prepared to teach you this valuable trade as it should be taught; our teachers are all expert dressmakers; the system is the same as used by all tailors; actual measure. The fashions are published, giving complete instructions and diagrams for drafting every garment worn by ladies, gentlemen and children. We will make you a first-class ladies' tailor. The trade will be valuable to you as long as you live. Call at the school and see the system.

Every Lady Her Own Dressmaker.

Every lady in the land, no matter what her position in life may be, should have a perfect knowledge of Dress Cutting and Dressmaking. Even if she is never called upon to make a dress herself, a perfect knowledge of the art will be of endless value to her in employing others to do the work. If a lady is an accomplished cutter and designer, she will take great pleasure in making her dresses, and the dresses of others; she will always be dressed neatly, with good taste, be she wealthy or poor. Should it ever become necessary to make her own living, or assist in supporting others, there is no art or trade that she can turn to as readily as dressmaking. The demand for first-class dressmakers is never supplied. The demand will be better tomorrow than today, better next month than this, better next year than ever before. The world is rapidly advancing in fashion. The day is past when you can become a successful dressmaker unaided, or make a success by using ready-made patterns. There is absolutely no demand for plain dressmakers; the market is now overcrowded, and always has been. If you would succeed and make this career pleasant and profitable, you should become a first-class Cutter, Designer and Ladies' Tailor. You should take a course of instruction in some responsible school where they have the talent and facilities to properly teach the art. There is no place in America as well equipped to teach you Dress Cutting and Ladies' Tailoring as WORK'S GARMENT CUTTING SCHOOL.

Use no other system, you will not be able to do this class of work if you do. There is no other system in this country doing this most important work. See the Garment Cutter, visit our schools, or call on its agents. Address all communications to

JOHN L. RICHARDSON, State Agent and Manager of Schools.

LOGAN SCHOOL

Special Teachers—Miss

IDA FARRAN

MRS. M. J. FERGUSON

School Rooms in the Rempel Opera House Block, Logan.

With a party, which has dominated public affairs, local, state and national for years, inculcating such pernicious doctrines through its press, it is to be wondered at that corruption and extravagance flourish.

With bosses naming candidates, not for their fitness, but for their service-ability and subservience, it is but natural that all the functions of government should be turned to the benefit of a small class to the injury and detriment of the masses.

When capable men can be elected to office without the corrupting influence of money, when states and independence, and not the collar of the boss, are recognized as deserving; then, and not till then, may the masses hope to share the common benefits of our system of political government.

The time has arrived in the history of the state of Ohio and of the country at large, when the order should be reversed, and men chosen to conduct public affairs who are unwilling and absolutely refuse to purchase office, or take part in the corruption of the electorate; who regard public office as a public trust, and not as a private convenience.
